A process analytical technology (PAT) approach was employed to enhance the recovery of solvent impurities from freeze-dried products by employing a combination of solid-phase extraction (SPE) and solid-phase microextraction (SPME). The solid-phase sorbent (e.g., C18, PS12, and carboxen/polydimethylsiloxane (CAR/PDMS)) was immersed into the formulation to be lyophilized, and the solvent impurities absorbed on the sorbent were extracted in a convenient manner. The effects of loading amount of the sorbent, the type of sorbent (polymeric vs. inorganic), and the volume of the formulation on extraction efficiency were evaluated. SPE enhanced the extraction efficiency of the sorbent by ~50% relative to SPME. The type of sorbent, contact time, and the volume of the sorbent were found to play a key role in the extraction of solvent impurities. The proposed strategy is promising for reducing solvent impurities in freeze-dried products, and it can be applied to a number of pharmaceutical and cosmetic products.Q: How to run cmake from internal source directory in Visual Studio? I'm trying to create a Visual Studio Project for a Qt project, and I'm having trouble with the cmake variable, which is defined in the.pro file. I cannot get cmake to run from C:\proj 3da54e8ca3
