Note Before you jump into this chapter, please make sure that you have read the "The key features of Photoshop" and "Working with layers" sections in Chapter 1. If you're new to Photoshop, especially if you're new to image editing, you may want to practice with the exercise files included with Photoshop. You can download them by clicking File→Automatically Download Files. You also can download the exercise files included with the various chapters. # The Pros and Cons of Photoshop This book is about working with images in Photoshop, so you may be wondering what all the fuss is about. After all, Photoshop is pretty much the industry standard program for editing digital images. Many people use it to create fantastic-looking images that they can save and print. That's good news for you, because you can use Photoshop to create incredible-looking pictures. And if you want, you can save your images in the popular JPEG, TIFF, or GIF file formats. You

All other graphics editors – desktop applications and online platforms like Pixlr.com and Canva.com – are built on top of Photoshop. They are built to offer the same features as Photoshop, but more are sometimes included. Photoshop is more popular than ever, and it is the most trusted tool for work or personal use. It is the most powerful tool for editing images and converting between different file formats. It allows users to crop, retouch, remove and replace imperfections, and modify any part of the image. Today, Photoshop is an essential part of any office or personal workstation. Here are some of the most common things you'll need to get your projects done: 1. The Toolbox If you are new to Photoshop, you will find that there are a lot of tools available in the toolbox. The colors that appear in the workspace and toolbox are associated with different functions. Color Picker The color picker allows you to adjust individual colors in an image, making it possible to achieve certain effects, such as softening a photo. 3. Basic Editing Tools When you create an image in Photoshop, you can use the tools to make changes to the layout. You can crop the image, resize it, or add text. Crop Tool Crop Tool allows you to select a portion of an image and remove the rest, removing unwanted objects from the photo. Blur Tool You can use the blurring tool to add a different, blurry effect to your photos. Desaturate Tools Desaturate Tools allow you to reduce the color of a picture. They can be used to remove background and foreground colors from a photo. 4. Filters and Adjustments Sometimes you will need to apply the results of filters to your photos. You can use Photoshop's filters and adjustments to apply the same effects to photos as well. Filters Filters are used to alter images in different ways. You can add effects such as black-and-white filters and vignette filters. Adjustments Adjustments are advanced tools that help you to add specific effects to photos. You can adjust the sharpness and contrast of an image, as well as the color balance. 5. Layers and Modes Layers allow you to create a separate layer for each part of the image that you want 388ed7b0c7

A large majority of Americans want a law enacted that would require the Social Security Administration to issue a new, state-by-state breakdown of the racial composition of the population, the Pew Research Center found. However, the public is sharply divided on how to deal with illegal immigration. Pew released the results of a nationwide telephone survey conducted June 26-30, 2017, on public attitudes about immigration. Overall, the public wants “a comprehensive approach to dealing with undocumented immigrants,” said Lee Miringoff, director of the Marist College Institute for Public Opinion. “They think the government needs to first address the programs that are producing these illegal immigrants.” Among those polled, 80 percent say the United States should “make sure that programs that encourage people to come here illegally are changed before any changes are made to immigration laws.” Just 20 percent are opposed to this statement. But far fewer – 43 percent – want to “give undocumented immigrants the right to become citizens of the United States.” Forty-eight percent oppose this position. Other key findings: • About half of Americans (49 percent) say they have either seen or heard about the case of an illegal immigrant trying to purchase firearms – while 47 percent say they have not heard about this. • Overall, 62 percent of those surveyed disapprove of President Trump’s decision to end former President Barack Obama’s Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals (DACA) program. Forty-five percent approve. • Thirty-two percent of all those surveyed want to allow undocumented immigrants currently living in the U.S. to apply for legal status. • In terms of the overall economic impact of immigration, 44 percent say it is mostly a good thing for the U.S., while 36 percent say it is mostly bad. • Notably, Americans seem to be genuinely split along party lines on how they feel about the economic impact of immigration. A plurality of each party – including 60 percent of Democrats and 41 percent of Republicans – say the impact is mostly bad, Pew found. “The overall public consensus is that there is a problem with illegal immigration,” Mr. Miringoff said. “But people have different ideas of what to do about it.” On whether Trump should have canceled DACA and instead left it up to Congress to act, the poll found that 42 percent said it was the wrong thing to

Using information from the cloud to keep your energy efficient Posted: Wednesday, 26 November 2017 The weather is currently cold and the heating is on in my office making it an ideal time to run a quick test. I have a Power outlet in the centre of my office that I use to charge my laptop, phone and tablet, along with the odd USB device. A standard 500 Watt device plugged into the outlet takes approximately 3 hours to fully charge on the 100% setting. A more realistic charge time would be around 6 hours. Plugging in my 32GB iPad Pro (as an example of a lower power consuming device) gives me 25% charge in around 3 hours. My home office has a couple of machines that I don't use regularly so they are plugged in to charge. Around half an hour of charging on the 100% setting will give around 10% charge. I then have the 3850 Watt single phase power point in the kitchen that I use for charging my Samsung Galaxy S7. This takes around half an hour to give around 30% charge. With the phone plugged in the air conditioning will kick in, draw more electricity and the battery will drop down to around 10%. A more realistic charge time would be around an hour. With similar results in the office you can see that I use the cloud. I can monitor how much energy my devices are using so that I can charge them in the most appropriate places. It is important that we use the most efficient devices and software available to us. Over 50% of what we consume is used to power our devices and the internet. The majority of our energy consumption goes to powering these devices. Using data from the cloud we can be more efficient at managing energy and have more time to be more efficient in other areas of our lives. Every cloud-based service that we use can be monitored. Cloud-based services are cheaper to run as they have zero overhead with servers and staff. Downtime is a bigger issue than ever and the power outage last year was a great wake up call. Over 25% of small businesses were not able to work for six months. After the events of September 11 in 2001, I was working as a Project Manager for an Office of National Emergency Preparedness (ONEP). We had to be ready for the possibility of an attack on the USA. Today, there are about 40 people working within the newly formed ONEP department at the Department of Homeland Security. We train all of our staff on
