USS San Jacinto (1860) USS San Jacinto was a single screw sidewheel gunboat of the United States Navy, in service from 1860 to 1865. San Jacinto was built in 1860 by the

Pressed Steel Company at Wilmington, North Carolina, in the same shipyard as the first steam-powered, iron-hulled U.S. Navy ship,, and she was named for San Jacinto Creek, near San Jacinto, Texas. The San Jacinto was purchased by the Navy at New York City on 26 February 1861, and commissioned on 23 May 1861, Lieutenant George M. Luce in command. Service history Union blockade Designated a "patrol gunboat" (PG), San Jacinto was assigned to the South Atlantic Blockading Squadron, then cruising off the coast of South Carolina and Georgia. The new gunboat, which had been designed to be carried by steamers as an after gun, carried a heavy armament in addition to its single side-mounted cannon. San Jacinto was outfitted with a main battery of ten 32-pounder smoothbore "Napoleon" siege guns, and six 32-pounder howitzer guns. Before the Civil War, Luce made a determined effort to avoid political controversy by refusing to interfere with the operations of civilian blockade runners. On 11 November 1861, he gave chase to the blockade runner James Pemberton, which had been heavily armed for attempt to deliver supplies from Wilmington, North Carolina to Confederate General Robert E. Lee's Army of Northern Virginia. Knowing that a run to the Cape Fear River would bring the blockade runner in range of his gunboat's long-range armament, Luce did not give chase and instead informed the captain of the armed privateer that he would be lenient if the blockade runner returned to the Wilmington area without further incident.
