I am using Android but I will use the docs you will get the idea Thanks in advance! A: The two methods are very similar but the major difference is that update() can fire on child events and create() can only fire on root events. As you may see in the documentation, there is a nodeId that you can have when using update() method. It's used to 0cc13bf012

Physicians from a nearby emergency medical services (EMS) may also be called to respond to calls. Under Pennsylvania law, many private companies may be authorized to provide emergency ambulance services. For these companies to respond to calls, they must be included in an approved contract with the district. EasyProgramDownload brings
