A Republican-led House subcommittee voted on Wednesday to send the Justice Department a comprehensive report detailing the “myriad abuses” of the Obama administration’s policy of separating children from their parents at the border, including granting legal status to thousands of children and failing to reunify them with their families. The report’s purpose is to inform the Justice Department of what is happening at the border, according to Rep.

Lamar Smith, R-Texas, who introduced the report. “If we are going to allow our federal government to impose radical policies on the American people, we must not only be aware of what is happening, but see it for ourselves,” said Mr. Smith. The subcommittee also heard testimony from the political organization America First Policies, which encourages congressional passage of immigration reform that prioritized securing the borders and interior enforcement. “We do not have a comprehensive immigration system in this country. We have a dysfunctional system. We need to fix the whole system,” said Angel Melendez, a spokesman for the organization. Mr. Melendez said that he expects the Trump administration’s proposed border wall to help improve immigration enforcement. “We need the wall for all the good reasons President Trump has given,” he said. “His wall was met with snide remarks that it’s ‘cute’ and ‘easy to make a wall.’ This system has failed.↻
